the opening of the Disarmament Conference, Henderson walked up and down the deck of his Channel steamer, occasionally pausing and taking off his bowler hat as though to ask a question; then recollecting himself, putting on his hat again, and continuing his perambulations.